CARNIVAL WEEK.

By Paul Harvey and John Foster

Carnival week at Fablesville with old Al, the farmer, as announcer, ticket-taker, ring-master and general target for the audience. The crowd doesn't care much for the tight-rope act or the bare-back turn. Nor is it appreciative when the old man, himself, does a buck and wing. Instead they cry for the bicycle race between Sylvester and Snicklefritz.

Heeding the fans' calls, old Al starts the race between the elephant and the ostrich. The race started, Al waltzes into the barn and takes a deep draught from a demi-john. The thrilling contest between the S's becomes tight, and so does our old man.

A spectacular finish, and the judge, slightly uneasy on his feet, announces, " The Rabbit Wins. " The crowd sees no rabbit, so it chases Al over the hill to find one.

AESOP SAYS:-

" MEN OFTEN GET CANNED FOR BEING PICKLED. "
